Pamela's Home Visit Set Despite Fall

KNOXVILLE (AP) — A fundamentalist preacher's daughter with deadly bone cancer was scheduled to go home for a visit today, despite a minor fall yesterday, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Pamela Hamilton, 12, is to visit her LaFollette home for two weeks following the completion of her fourth round of court-ordered chemotherapy, said Pat Kelly, a spokeswoman for East Tennessee Children's Hospital.

Doctors watched her last night to make sure she was not injured when one of her crutches slipped and she landed on her left side, Kelly said. Part of Pamela's left thigh bone has been eaten away by a large tumor.

Pamela began the cancer treatment in September after a juvenile court judge ruled that her parents were negligent in not seeking treatment for her Ewing's sarcoma, which was discovered in July. The Hamiltons cited their religious sect's beliefs that forbid members from using medicine.

Residents Fighting For Building Funds

FRANKLIN, Tenn. — Residents of the nearby Burwood community were rallying support last night for a Williamson County Chancery Court battle with the county school board for $7,500 to apply to community projects.

About 40 residents attending a town meeting last night at Huff's General Merchandise Store discussed the possibility of building a community center or a fire station with the money.

At question is proceeds from the sale of a house in Burwood where teachers had once lived, adjacent to the former Burwood Elementary School, closed in 1967. A court-ordered sale of the house last May produced the $7,500, after all costs and fees were subtracted.

Although the owner of the house, the late R.V. Akin Sr., had deeded the house and its lot to the community in the early 1950s, the school board now wants all proceeds from the auction of the house, said Brown Cannon of Burwood, a trustee for the property.

School board officials say they would like to apply the funds to a playground at Hillsboro Elementary School, now attended by Burwood area students, in the nearby Hillsboro community.

Rafters To Pay Fee To Ride on Ocoee

OCOEE, Tenn. (UPI) — White-water rafters will pay a fee to ride the Ocoee River under a congressional plan to keep the popular stream running wild for 117 days a year, state officials said yesterday.

President Reagan signed legislation Monday that included $6.4 million to pay TVA for shutting down a hydroelectric plant and letting the Ocoee River flow freely.

The money would make up for hydropower lost when the plant is shut down over its 35-year life. The state of Tennessee would get $1 million for managing the river.

State Conservation Commissioner Charles Howell said the state will be forced to charge a user fee because of a last-minute change in the plan that calls for repayment of the $7.4 million in federal money. He said he hoped it would be "considerably less" than the $3.75 per rafter fee proposed earlier by TVA.

Frank Gorrell Picked For Airport Board

Frank C. Gorrell, a senior law partner in the firm of Bass, Berry and Sims, has been appointed to the Board of Commissioners of the Metro Nashville Airport Authority.

Gorrell's appointment was made by Mayor Richard Fulton and approved by the Metro Council's Rules and Confirmation Committee last month. He will fill the seat made vacant by the death of Allen Steele last June.

Gorrell is a native of Russellville, Ky., and a graduate of the law school at Vanderbilt University. He was a member of the state Senate from 1963 to 1971, serving as lieutenant governor and speaker of the Senate from 1967 to 1971.

He is a member of the national and state bar associations, the American Judicature Society and the Tennessee Trial Lawyers Association.

Gorrell's appointment to the seven-member airport board will expire in April of 1989.

Spencer Now Co-Educational; Cockrill Bend Mixing Canceled

By DWIGHT LEWIS

Spencer Youth Center here has been converted into a co-educational facility but state Correction Department officials canceled plans to move women inmates to the more spacious Cockrill Bend Regional Prison.

"The girls from Highland Rim got here about 10:30 Monday night and everything is going real well," Mike Slaughter, director of the formerly all boys juvenile institution, said yesterday.

"We have not experienced any problems."

Meanwhile, Ron Bishop, assistant to Correction Commissioner Ernest Pellegrin, said department officials have decided to keep adult women prisoners incarcerated ed in a facility located in the Bordeaux area.

Last January, Correction Department officials announced that a part of their "Correction Plan for the '80s" included moving the women prisoners from their present facility to Cockrill Bend, now being used as a classification center.

The Bordeaux facility in turn was to have become the classification center for this area.

"We looked at the situation and saw that we would be losing 300 beds for the men which we need," Bishop said. "So, we decided against the move."

Bishop said officials thought the state's male prison population would drop by a significant number by the time the move was to take place but that did not occur.

The 43 Highland Rim residents were transferred to Spencer because the Correction Department is converting the Tullahoma facility into a training center for correction personnel.

The conversion is a result of a ruling last year by U.S. District Judge L. Clure Morton that declared the state's prison system unconstitutional and in need of reform.

"The girls are living in two dorms here on campus and the boys have their own dorms," Slaughter said.

Slaughter said Spencer has hired some new dorm supervisors already and a few more will begin working next week.

Earlier, Dick Baumbach, an assistant to Pellegrin, said some additional security personnel have been hired at Spencer to insure a smooth operation after the girls were moved to the facility.

Hendersonville Move To Annex Land Deepens Controversy With Gallatin

by Mr. Fuqua that our wishes have no weight," said Gladys Moore, one of 30 Number One residents who last night protested the annexation of their property. "We do not want to be swallowed up by anybody."

WHILE THE Hendersonville City Commission will consider the annexation Tuesday night, Gallatin city council meets tomorrow night for a public hearing and first reading of the annexation ordinance. Gallatin's final reading, however, is not scheduled until Nov. 30.

Meanwhile, in Gallatin last night, more than 100 Douglas Bend-Cages Bend residents adjacent to the proposed development met at Volunteer State Community College to discuss their opposition to Foxland Hall.

"The general idea and plan of action available to us is the public council meeting in Gallatin Thursday night, to be there to offer a show of numbers and a number of objections to the development," said Preston Stark, who has a lakefront home that would face the Foxland Hall complex.

CAROLYN CHAFFIN, a Number One resident at the Gallatin meeting last night, said that the residents adjacent to the development also were urged to call the councilmen prior to the meeting and object to the annexation proposal.

"It's our understanding that if it is not annexed and if it is not zoned [for the complex] then the development will not come together," Stark said.

Although 200 Number One residents in 1981 requested to be annexed by Hendersonville because of fire protection needs, Number One Volunteer Fire Department Chief Herbert Bates told planners last night fire protection is no longer an issue. The fire department was organized after Hendersonville rejected the residents' request.

Student Data Misleading In Gun Sale, Store Says

question sheriff's officials about whether amnesia was considered a mental illness.

As required by law, Wartell took the form to sheriff's office for approval, returned the signed state form to the store and then filled out a federal form.

Sheriff Truman Jones, who was chief deputy at the time, signed the state form which indicated she had suffered mental illness.

ANDERSON said he had earlier had some doubt whether the sheriff would approve the gun sale. Jones is expected to testify today in the civil jury trial, which is scheduled to last through tomorrow.

On the separate federal form, which Wartell answered in her own handwriting, she said she had never been "adjudicated mentally defective" nor been committed to a mental institution.

Her mother said that Holli had probably answered no to those questions because she had always agreed to be hospitalized for her condition. Although court proceedings to force the daughter into institutions had been discussed, no legal action had been necessary, Leanne Wartell testified.

THE INCIDENTS of amnesia to which her daughter referred happened about a year before the suicide, when Holli Wartell had been found wandering in a dazed state by police in Alabama, the mother said.

Wartell died in the bedroom of her parents' Franklin home from a self-inflicted gunshot wound to the head.
